

Cauliflower

Irrigation

First irrigation is given just after transplanting of seedlings and subsequent irrigations are given at an interval of 8-10 days depending upon the season and soil conditions. For early and mid-season crop usually lesser number of irrigation are needed because of rains. Moisture during both growth and curding phase should be adequate to maintain an even growth and proper development of curd.